

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

May 1, 2009

Jacksonville, FL

Thomas Dayspring MD, FACP, director of the North Jersey Institute of Menopausal Lipidology and a Clinical Assistant Professor of Medicine at New Jersey Medical School, has recently been awarded Fellow status with the National Lipid Association (NLA). The NLA is a nonprofit, multidisciplinary medical society with over 3,500 members dedicated to reducing the morbidity and mortality from dyslipidemia and strengthening cardiovascular disease prevention.

Dr. Dayspring joins the select few physicians and allied healthcare professionals from across the nation who have achieved this important credential. The NLA awards Fellow status to those physicians and allied healthcare professionals who have distinguished themselves amongst their colleagues and who have satisfied the requirements established by the NLA for such recognition. Dr. Dayspring is also certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine and is a certified Menopause Practitioner by the North American Menopause Society (NCMP).

To obtain Fellow status with the NLA, an NLA member must be in good standing with the organization, hold a professional degree, be nominated by at least two persons familiar with his or her practice, be recognized by peers for important contributions to the field of clinical lipidology, and have demonstrated a significant commitment to the NLA at the national or regional level. Upon approval by the NLA board of directors, accepted Fellows of the NLA may append their names with the title, "FNLA."

For more information on dyslipidemia and the field of lipidology, or to find a certified lipidologist, visit www.lipid.org.

Daniel Sosnoski,

Director of Communications of National Lipid Association

dsosnoski@lipid.org or 904-998-0854.